INFORMATION GUIDE

11th SUMMIT OF HEADS OF STATE
AND GOVERNMENT OF THE ORGANISATION
OF AFRICAN, CARIBBEAN
AND THE PACIFIC STATES (OACPS)

I. GENERAL FRAMEWORK AND PRESENTATION OF THE HOST COUNTRY

1.1. The Republic of Equatorial Guinea

The Republic of Equatorial Guinea, situated in Central Africa along the Gulf of Guinea, comprises two distinct geographical regions: the Insular Region and the Continental Region (Río Muni).

The Insular Region encompasses the island of Bioko, on which the capital city, Malabo, is located, as well as the island of Annobón.

The Continental Region is bordered to the north by Cameroon, to the east and south by Gabon, and to the west by the Gulf of Guinea. The city of Bata serves as its principal urban and economic centre.

The national territory extends over approximately 28,052 km² and is administratively divided into eight provinces: Annobón, Bioko Norte, Bioko Sur, Centro Sur, Kie-Ntem, Litoral, Djibloho, and Wele-Nzas.

1.2. Air access and airlines serving Equatorial Guinea

The Republic of Equatorial Guinea has five principal airports distributed between the insular and continental regions. Malabo International Airport, located on the island of Bioko, serves as the country's primary international gateway. On the mainland, the airports of Bata and Mongomeyen provide domestic and regional services. The islands of Corisco and Annobón each also have an airport.

Malabo International Airport offers regular connections to several regional and intercontinental destinations, including Madrid (Spain), Paris (France), Frankfurt (Germany), Casablanca (Morocco), Addis Ababa (Ethiopia), Douala (Cameroon), Libreville (Gabon), Abidjan (Côte d'Ivoire), Accra (Ghana), Cotonou (Benin), Lomé (Togo), São Tomé (São Tomé and Príncipe), and Lagos (Nigeria).

Major airlines serving Malabo include Ethiopian Airlines, Air France, Lufthansa, Royal Air Maroc, Camair-Co, Ceiba Intercontinental, and Cronos Airlines.

Domestic flights between Malabo, Bata, Corisco, Mongomeyen, and Annobón are primarily operated by the national carriers Ceiba Intercontinental and Cronos Airlines.

1.3. Telephone communications and emergency services

The international dialling code for the Republic of Equatorial Guinea is +240.

The principal regional codes are as follows:

Malabo: 333 09

Bata: 333 08

In the event of an emergency, the following services are operational:

- National Police – Malabo Central Police Station: +240 333 09 2779 or 113
- National Police – Bata Police Station: (to be confirmed)
- Emergency Medical Services: +240 222 246 383 / +240 222 246 269
- National Fire Brigade: 115
- Rapid Response Unit: (contact details to be confirmed)

For official delegations, any matter requiring special assistance may also be communicated through the established protocol and security channels of the Summit.

1. Currency and means of payment

The official currency of the Republic of Equatorial Guinea is the Central African CFA franc (XAF). The country is a member of the Central African Economic and Monetary Community (CEMAC), whose currency is pegged to the euro at a fixed exchange rate.

The banknotes currently in circulation are denominated in 10,000, 5,000, 1,000 and 500 CFA francs, while coins are available in 500, 100, 50, 25, 10 and 5 CFA francs.

Exchange rates (for information purposes only) are as follows: 1 Euro (EUR) = 655.957 CFA francs; 1 US dollar (USD) ≈ 604.619 CFA francs; 1 British pound (GBP) ≈ 767.873 CFA francs; 1 Chinese yuan (CNY) ≈ 84.143 CFA francs; 1 Japanese yen (JPY) ≈ 4.111 CFA francs

Exchange rates other than the fixed parity with the Euro are given for information purposes only and may vary depending on the financial institution.

The main commercial banks in Malabo accept international credit cards (including Visa and Mastercard). Card payments are generally accepted in international hotels and major commercial establishments.

Nevertheless, delegations are advised to bring cash in CFA francs for everyday expenses.

1.4. Climate, environment and natural setting

The Republic of Equatorial Guinea enjoys a hot and humid equatorial climate, characterised by high and relatively constant temperatures throughout the year with annual average of around 25–26 °C, and abundant rainfall exceeding 1,500 mm per annum.

The insular region (Bioko and Annobón) has distinct dry and rainy seasons influenced by maritime and volcanic conditions. The continental region has two dry seasons and two rainy seasons, with high humidity levels between 85 and 90% and particularly heavy rainfall between September and December.

The country features diverse terrain:

- The mainland alternates between coastal plains, plateaus, and mountain ranges (including Mount Mitra and Mount Alen).
- Bioko Island, of volcanic origin, is dominated by Pico Basile (3,011 m).
- Annobón also features marked volcanic relief.

Equatorial Guinea is distinguished by its remarkable biodiversity, with extensive tropical forests covering a significant portion of the territory. Nearly 20% of the national territory is designated for conservation. The fauna includes primates (gorillas, chimpanzees, mandrills), forest elephants, sea turtles and more than 300 bird species.

1.5. Culture, languages and society

The population is predominantly of Bantu origin, including the Fang, Bubi, Ndowé, Bisio and Annobonese peoples, as well as Creole and Pygmy communities (Beyeles and Bokuigns). The different communities coexist in a climate of social stability.

Spanish is the official language of administration and education. French and Portuguese are also official languages. Various Bantu languages are widely spoken within local communities.

2. Gastronomy

Equatorial Guinean cuisine reflects a dual African and European influence. It places great importance on fresh fish, local produce (including peanuts, yams, plantains, okra) and traditional sauces.

The cities of Malabo and Bata offer a variety of restaurants serving local and international cuisine, including establishments such as Sofitel Sipopo Restaurant, Pizza Place, La Luna, Délice de France, Aviator, L'Oriental, Imagine, Kristania and Café Malabo.

These establishments provide a blend of international, Mediterranean, European, and local cuisine in settings well suited to business meetings, as well as official and private dining engagements.

1.6. Tourist attractions and places of interest

The Republic of Equatorial Guinea offers visitors a remarkable natural and cultural environment, particularly on the island of Bioko, where the capital city, Malabo, is situated.

Places of interest include the National Park, a preserved natural area ideal for walks and the exploration of local biodiversity, and the Moka region, renowned for its mountainous landscapes, volcanic lakes and more temperate climate.

The Paseo Marítimo is ideal for seaside promenades and affords panoramic views of the Gulf of Guinea. The Hacienda El Retiro (Riaba) enables visitors to discover the historical and architectural heritage linked to the colonial era, while the La Granja tourist complex offers leisure activities in a natural environment suitable for families and visitors alike.

These sites exemplify the country's natural and cultural heritage and may be visited subject to the availability and programme of the delegations.
